OLD CHARMS AND DEVICES

And Many New Ones, Were Tried in Attempt to Fathom the Future, at Many Social Gatherings.

After a festival of heathen origin during which the goblins and witches as well as the good fairies were supposed to be turned loose for high revel, it was not to be wondered at if material things like veranda chairs, horse-blocks, fences, and sidewalks were found far from the scenes of their former tenancy this morning. After all, though those who leagued themselves with the more gentle spirits and grove by proper signs and devices to pierce the veil of the future, were the more fortunate. While eating an apple before a mirror in a darkened room some saw dimly the faces of their future husbands peering over their shoulders. This was much more satisfactory and convincing, if it worked, than tossing the peeling which was to form itself into the initial of the destined one's name. The nuts burning quickly or slowly on the hot shovel, revealing the fickleness of constancy of the lovers after whom they were named, and the divers other tests kept many little companies busied until long after midnight.

Miss Anna Valentine Hostess. Shrouded in sheets and masked in white, a company of "spirits" wended their way about eight o'clock to the home of Miss Anna Valentine on South Second street. In the dim light of the interior the countenances of scores of jack-o'-lanterns glowed and leered like tragic masks and myriads of small spheres swung from the doorways and from time to time testified to the "transparency" of the visitors. The ghostly assemblage presently seated itself on the floor and while, in some remote quarter, the wind carressing the strings of an Aeolian harp, caused them to wail and sob and murmur, the recital of a ghastly tale was begun and taken up in turn by the "presences" who spoke in muffled tones and frequently punctuated their utterances with unearthly groans and shrieks. After a time a committee of spirit judges withdrew and returning presently, awarded a death's head to Ghost No. 12 for his portion of the narrative. Then the visitors from spirit-land, as if by signal, took their departure and in the course of time more material being appeared to take their places. In the series of games and tests which followed Miss Mae Valentine and Robert Bostwick won clever novelty prizes for the largest scores in a peanut race. Blindfolded, no one succeeded in piercing with a hairpin a mysterious bag which depended from a doorway through several canals very close. An electric battery was connected with a basin of water in which there were several coins and the unsuccessful efforts to secure the latter provided much amusement. In the same basin little walnut-shell ships bearing lighted candles and appropriately named were launched and when the great waves caused them to seek one another's company it was deemed a good omen. Then there were experiments in blowing out twenty-five lighted candles at once, those remaining alight in each instance recording the number of years before the experimenter should be wedded. In the third story of the residence, behind mysterious screens, were mannikins representing the future wife and husband, and each couple devoutly made the pilgrimage

NOBODY IS EXEMPT.

A New Preparation Which Everyone Will Need Sooner or Later.

Almost everybody's digestion is disordered more or less, and the commonest thing they do for it is to take some one of the many so-called blood purifiers which, in many cases, are merely strong cathartics. Such things are not needed. If the organs are in a clogged condition, they need only a little help and they will right themselves. Cathartics irritate the sensitive linings of the stomach and bowels and often do more harm than good.

Purgings is not what is needed. The thing to do is to put the food in condition to be readily digested and assimilated. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do this perfectly. They partly digest what is eaten and give the stomach just the help it needs. They stimulate the secretion and excretion of the digestive fluids and relieve the congested condition of the glands and membranes. They put the whole digestive system in condition to do its work. When that is done you need take no more tablets, unless you eat what does not agree with you. Then take one or two tablets—give them needed help, and you will have no trouble.

It's a common sense medicine and a common-sense treatment, and it will cure every time. Not only cure the disease but cure the cause. Goes about it in a perfectly sensible way. We have testimonials enough to fill a book, but we don't publish many of them. However—Mrs. E. M. Faith of Byrd's Creek, Wis., says:

"I have taken all the tablets I got of you and they have done their work well in my case. For I feel like a different person altogether. I don't doubt if I had not got them I should have been at rest by this time."

H. E. Willard, Onslow, Iowa, says: "Mr. White, of Canton, was telling me of your Dyspepsia Tablets curing him of dyspepsia, from which he suffered for eight years. As I am a sufferer myself I wish you to send me a package by return mail."

Phil. Brooks, Detroit, Mich., says: "Your Dyspepsia cure has worked wonders in my case. I suffered for years from Dyspepsia, but am now entirely cured and enjoy life as I never have before. I gladly recommend them."

It will cost 50c to find out just how much Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will help you. Try them—that's the best way to decide.

BOOKS and Magazines

The Pilgrim for November.

The Pilgrim for November, just issued, is quite the most interesting number of this important magazine that we remember to have seen. Its splendidly illustrated articles and excellent fiction, combine to make an issue that possesses high merit. Mr. Nevins O. Winter writes interestingly of "Quaking Guatemala." Allan W. Day tells in an illustrated article of the achievements of certain police dogs of the South. Felix J. Koch has a paper on the Romanian Gipsies and their life. Paul Stuart Hunter writes of "The Women of China," and Stella Reid Crothers offers an interesting and valuable group of biographies on the "Women Illustrators of America." An article that will be read with delight by every American housewife has to do with the vicissitudes of a transplanted American who sets up her Lanes and Penates in Venice. The New Hall Caine play is discussed by Kenneth Herford, and in addition there are page of portraits of young women of the stage. A multitude of Thanks-giving hints will be found in the various household articles and departments. The first story in The Pilgrim for November is a touching tale, "Miss Cynthia's Niche," by Agnes Louise Pratt. "The Heart of Arizona" is a New Mexican story by Contrado Blum. In "Whistling the Woodcock," Clarence A. Lewis tells the story of a game bird's life. The Pilgrim's "The Light of Morning" approaches its conclusion in the November issue. The department "What's Occurring," written each month by Hiram Moe Greene, is especially interesting this month.

Red Tape at Panama. The experience of the past year will have been wasted unless the controlling authorities at Washington are able to break away from the moss-covered traditions of Governmental control, applying ordinary and common-sense methods to the accomplishment of the work, and congress shall enact legislation enabling this to be done.

The so-called "free hand"—with the rest of the body and limbs tightly bound with red-tape—can perform but limited functions.

It is not within the province of this article to get into details, but it should be plainly evident that Governmental methods which require from ten to twelve years to complete a structure such as the Federal building in Chicago—which, under private individual ownership and control could have been erected in the space of a single year's time or at most two—cannot be applied to the construction of the Panama Canal with satisfactory results, if the present generation is to derive benefit from its accomplishment and at reasonable cost. John F. Wallace in The Engineering Magazine for November.

What Japan Has Done for Korea. Within a brief year and a half, and under the exigencies of a war, Japan has gained a partial control of the foreign affairs and the local administration, and a complete mastery over the transportation, communication, currency, navigation, and fisheries of Korea, and thus has succeeded in laying a broad foundation for the economic enterprise of this industrial nation of the world. Side by side with the activities of the authorities, private citizens of Japan have migrated in large numbers to Korea, where they are now reckoned by tens of thousands, and the entire peninsula is already assuming an air of great fermentation. The schools are filled with pupils, periodicals and books are eagerly bought, men of the two nationalities are jostling each other, and the local officials are subjected to the merciless scrutiny of the unwelcome foreigners. The older people are compelled by circumstances to adjust themselves to the fast growing new surroundings, while the younger generations are forced, in spite of themselves, to take more and more heed of what passes in a sphere wider than that of their self-interest. On the other hand, "the war helped rather than hindered trade," says an American consular report. "The commercial highways being held open. Cereals yielded large crops and sold high, both Japan and Russia buying. Labor was abundantly supplied with work at good wages. Much of this had to do with the movement of troops. This brought in millions of dollars of unexpected and unusual money."—K. Asakawa, in the Atlantic for November.

Dog Judge Discusses Points. James Watson, the veteran judge and dog owner, writes in the November Country Calendar of the system of points.

"To explain the why and wherefore of one dog being better than another is not possible except by the general statement that a good dog is nearer the standard of requirements for that particular breed, which usually consists of about twenty-five per cent for head proportions, the same for legs and feet, for body, and for color and symmetry. In the Dalmatian, for instance, thirty points are given for color and markings, while head, eyes and ears have only fifteen; the bulldog, on the other hand, has forty-five for head and ears, while color and color amount to but five points; the collie has twenty-five for coat, color being immaterial, and twenty-five for head and ears. The St. Bernard has forty for head and ears and five each for coat and color; the Pomeranian has but fifteen for head and ears, forty-five points going for coat color and tail, with fifteen for appearance. It may be set down, as governing in all breeds of dogs, that whatever is the typical feature of that breed is the feature upon which stress is laid in the allotment of points."

In the American Monthly Review of Reviews for November, the most prominent topics of discussion are, the independent tendency in American politics, as illustrated in Mr. Jo-rome's fight for re-election in New York and in other local campaigns in various parts of the country; the question of insurance management; the meeting of Russia's first parliament, the Duma, and the method of its election; the lessons in sanitation taught up by Japan's recent war experience; the movement for church federation in America and England; the contribution made by Jews to our national life (apropos of the hundred-and-fiftieth anniversary of the first Jews in America); the present condition of rural Ireland, and the workings of the new land law; and the provision for sports and games in the park playgrounds of our great cities.

The Four-Track News for November opens with an exceedingly interesting article entitled "Deep-sea Fishing," by Bertha H. Smith. Other articles of more than passing interest are: "In Far Australia," by Lida A. Churchill; "The Pearl of the Black Forest," by Grace Isabel Colborn; "General Phil Kearney," by Harold B. Johnson; "Preparing for War," by M. L. Oliver; "The Highlands of Ontario," by Lawrence H. Tasker; "New York's Backbone," by Emma Archer Osborne; "Camera Camoes," by Frank Yeigh; "Enriched With a Golden Grid," by Ruby Carlton Johnson; "The Harlem in History," by L. K. Becker; "The Great American," by Austin Cook; "Fort Blunder," by Lenthel Stanton; "The Civilized Wilderness," by L. F. Brown; "In Howell's Boston," by S. Harry Ferris; "The Grandest of the Old Missions," by Page Fellew; "Nature Repeats Itself," by L. W. Harger and C. A. Foss; "The Castle of Chillon," by Nellie Blessing Eyster; "The Inspiration of Arthur Blaine," by Mrs. Kenneth Brown, and "The Afro-American Ostrich," by Day Allen Wiley. All of these articles are beautifully illustrated. In addition to these are the usual departments devoted to The World's Progress, Vest Pocket Condensations, The Trail of the Traveler, The Book Table and Dramatic.

Doctor Winthrop are incidentals to the play. The laughs are, many of them, fantastically forced, but they are laughs. For instance, there may be people in the world who believe that in the western mining towns "east of the divide" the horny-handed gold diggers do not know the back from the front of a glove, or that they cannot count the fingers of one hand, or that in a modern and somewhat ornate "hostelry" they are wont to act like Yaqui Indians. Such is the big comedy scene of this play, and last night it caused immoderate laughter. The comedy is, paradoxically, oftentimes a weak and still a very strong feature of the play. The lines are good and frequently are sent home with decided force.

Says Lacy of the "heir": "He was unwelcome to her, but I'll welcome him; I'll surround his life with a love—a love like a bursting torrent."

His expression of love for his wife is: "For a girl like that I'd do time in hell."

Says the brother of Lacy, talking of the marriage: "Here for years we've cut everything three ways; now he's gone and got married." And the partner replies: "Well, we can't cut that three ways."

When he tells of his own childhood he says: "A tin horse or a dog with red paint is more pleasure at 3 than a million at 30."

Says another of the awkward group, in characteristic confession of his affection for a girl: "All the world knows how strong you are with me."

AVERAGES SHOW COLD WEATHER

OCTOBER WARM IN EARLY DAYS; COLD IN LATTER.

GENERAL AVERAGE WAS 55.6

Thrice the Thermometer Showed That Temperature Fell Below Freezing Mark.

Three times during the month of October the mercury dropped below the freezing point—on the twenty-fifth to 30, and on the twenty-ninth and thirty-first to 29. The average low temperature was more than 12 degrees above 32, the warm spell at the opening of October bringing it up. The high temperatures in the early days stood around 50 but during the latter fell far below that and averaged 66.1. This average is 12.8 below the high average for September. The average low temperature fell 11.7 from that of the previous month, standing for October at 44.7. The general average decreased naturally the number of degrees midway between 11.7 and 12.8—standing for October at 55.5. The pleasant warm weather of the first dozen days also were largely responsible for October going on record as a fairly good month as regards weather conditions. Thirteen days were designated as clear or fair, one of them being called perfect; twelve were cloudy, rainy or a drizzle made the day miserable and three were half way days of partly cloudy. = FORTY YEARS AGO = forty years ago. The Janesville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, November 1, 1865.—Money Order Office.—The post office of this city has been designated as a money order office, but as yet, no blanks have arrived, and the transaction of business, has not therefore commenced. It will no doubt prove a great accommodation to our citizens.

Race in Chicago.—We learn that a race came off on Monday last, on the Chicago driving park, between the sorrel horse, "Sandy," owned by Lieutenant N. Crotenberg of this city, and the bay horse, "Joe Davis," owned by J. DeNoll of Dane county. The race was a single dash of a mile, for $300, and was won by "Joe Davis" in 2:05.

The Concert Last Night.—One of the flattest things of the season came off at Lappin's hall last night in the shape of a concert and recitations by Madame Bahr, Miss Randolph and Mr. Van Buren. We went on a free ticket and should perhaps hold the performance in higher esteem if we had paid for it; on the principle that those things which cost most are prized highest; as it was we voted the whole thing a humbug. Those ladies have mistaken their calling. They can neither sing nor play. We think they might succeed on one of Doty's premium washing machines but they never can up-on the piano. The piano forte is not their forte and they can serve themselves and the public to much better advantage by turning their attentions to some other pursuit.

As for Mr. Van Buren, his performance was beneath criticism or even ridicule. His voice might serve to drive oxen or sell Wizard oil at an auction, but it has not one musical sound.

They advertise liberally and no doubt manufacture their own "opinions of the press." They are welcome to this one free of charge.

Fine Specimens of Work.—It is always a source of real pleasure to an appreciative person, to see a finished specimen of work in whatever department of labor it may be found. The lovers of beautiful in marble work can gratify their aesthetic taste by visiting the establishment of Mr. E. W. Childs, where are being built a number of monuments, two of which are worthy of special mention. One of these is to mark the resting place of Mr. Stiles Hakes of Edgerton. It is made up of three bases, a die and a spire, stands fourteen feet high and weighs about six tons. The design is chaste and beautiful and the workmanship superior in all respects. The other is to indicate the grave of Lieut. Swift of Edgerton who went out in Capt. Miltimore's company of the 33d regiment. This, though smaller, is more elaborate in design and carving. The emblems are crossed flags, an eagle resting on a shield with a copperhead snake in his talons, a drum with a pall thrown over it and from underneath which the handle of a sword is visible. Mr. Childs has shown a great deal of taste in the execution of these orders which reflects the highest credit on the skill of himself and his workmen.

..COMING ATTRACTIONS..

JOHN W. RANSOME IN "THE ISLE OF BONG BONG," HERE NOV. 4

"The Isle of Bong Bong" is a refreshingly and strikingly original musical extravaganza. Manager E. C. Whitney considers it to be by far his most pretentious production, and personally describes it as "A Sparkling Musical Surprise." This is probably the best "singing" show on the road this season. A few of the genuine hits which are introduced for the first time include "Ask the Man," "My Uncle Sam," "I'm Lonesome For You," "Diplomacy," "Oh Guess Oil! Tike a Ride," "If I Were the Man in the Moon," "The Floating Isle of Bong Bong," "Oh, the Deuce, What's the Use?" "The Revel of the Brownies," "On Such a Night as This," and "Heap Love," a spectacular Indian serenade. "The Isle of Bong Bong" is scheduled for an early date at the Myers Grand, which will be on Saturday, November 4, matinee and night.

General Railway Notes.

Percy R. Todd, first vice-president of the New Haven & Hartford for personal reasons will retire from active duty in connection with the company at the beginning of November. Mr. Todd has been one of the New Haven's hardest working officials and the board of directors are not at all willing that he should retire. Being in the full vigor of young manhood and in robust health, they consider it regrettable that circumstances have led him to deem it necessary to relinquish the duties of the position he has so ably filled.

The Louisville & Nashville will establish an interurban service between New Orleans and the Mississippi gulf coast resorts, owing to the threatened competition of an electric line between Biloxi and Bay St. Louis, Miss., with the ultimate purpose of extending it to New Orleans and Mobile.

Reports from the Canadian Northwest received here say that the Doukhobors, who caused Russia so much trouble and Canada a little less, are going to take part in the construction work of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Some members of the Doukhobor community have become very proficient in railroad work, and two of the men have, on behalf of the whole community, entered into a formal contract to build some of the heaviest portions of the road along the Assiniboine and Qu'Appelle rivers.

Canadian shippers have made complaint to their railway commission that the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk roads do not supply enough cars to move the wheat crop from Georgian bay ports to the seaboard. An agent of the commission has been ordered to make an investigation.

At Oklahoma City it is stated that cotton traffic has grown to such proportions in western Oklahoma that the Rock Island found it necessary to put on extra trains to haul the product to the compresses at Oklahoma City, Shawnee and El Reno.

It is said that the Texas railroad commission is likely to cancel or withdraw emergency rates on dry goods to prevent a test at this time, so far in advance of a session of the legislature of the law authorizing the making of emergency rates.

“Every success admits of being outdone.” The biggest store in any line, in this city has not arrived yet. It is on the way—it may be here this time next year—it is almost entirely a matter of advertising.

President Roosevelt has discovered a solid south, but it is solid another way.

Any one looking for a Russian grand duke these days should not fail to look under the bed.

Will envious outsiders please take notice that it was the horses that took the prizes at the horse show?

If the railroads could think of any worse name than anarchy that is what they would call rate regulation.

Emperor Nicholas need not worry about his job. Russia will need a good figurehead for some time to come.

Count Witte says that a few rich capitalists control the votes of this country. The count will have to guess again.

Norway may have to take a non-union king, for the kings' union may decline to furnish it with a guaranteed monarch.

In future the function of the grand dukes will be ornamental rather than practical—and they are not so very ornamental at that.

It would be well for the railway managers to dwell upon the suggestive fact that the president goes back to Washington in a warship.

Very likely some of Boss Murphy's followers have pressing personal reasons for not wanting a prosecuting official of Mr. Jerome's efficiency.

Apparently some of the smaller life insurance companies did as much “missionary work” as was possible in view of their restricted opportunities.

No one can say that Rudyard Kipling does not keep abreast of the times. He has written a thrilling realistic story of adventures in an airship.

CCastro never feels so much like snuggling up in a friendly way to this country as when some European power begins to get busy with its warships.

In making peace the Japanese may have foreseen that it would be useless for them to try to do more harm to Russia than it could do to itself if left alone.

One reason why the opponents of rate regulation have no reason to feel hurt at being excluded from Steinway hall is that they were not invited.

Russian reformers feel that if they can secure liberty of speech, a free press and representative government they will have no trouble in doing the rest themselves.

Even more interesting than the question as to what McCurdy did to earn his salary is the question as to what the state insurance superintendent did to earn his.

STILL IN THE UNITED STATES.
For the first time in the history of the United States a President was beyond the territorial boundaries of the country. But no one need worry over the matter. Mr. Roosevelt was aboard an armored cruiser, and that alone is United States enough to satisfy the most hypocritical among those who think that the chief executive has no right to go beyond geographical limits. There is an established rule that wherever the judge may be there is the court with its prerogatives; therefore, wherever the President may be there is the United States.

WITTE'S ARGUMENT.
Count Witte in his reply to the deputation of strikers who waited upon him with a demand for a National Assembly, elected by universal suffrage, said that universal suffrage would lead to bribery, corruption and the usurpation of power by the capitalists. He declared he saw instances of this during his recent trip in the United States. Thus bribery, graft and lawlessness existing in the United States under a system of free government furnishes the great Russian statesman with an argument against the establishment of free government in Russia, says the Wall Street Journal.

We may well hide our faces in shame that this should be so. But there is something to be said on the other side. Is there no bribery and corruption and usurpation of power and oppression under the autocratic government of Russia? Moreover, is it not true that a popular government like that existing in the United States serves to create and educate a public opinion which steadily works for good government? Graft exists in republics as in despotism, but freedom creates millions of witnesses for truth and honesty. Even imperfect freedom is better and will last longer than any despotism however enlightened.

DOMESTIC TRADE.
Important domestic trade movements during September, as reported to the Department of Commerce and Labor, through its Bureau of Statistics, present, with few exceptions, decided improvements over corresponding movements in 1904, while the same is true, to even a greater extent, with regard to similar activities for the first nine months of the current year. Gains in the receipts and shipments of live stock and grain have been more than ordinarily heavy live-stock arrivals at five leading markets during the present year to September 30 having been nearly two million head in excess of what they were for a like month in 1904. While the increase in grain receipts at twelve important interior centers, by a like comparison, amounted to over 27½ million bushels.

Eastbound trunk-line tonnage further emphasizes the gain in cereal movements. Shipments from Chicago and Chicago points during the month of September amounted to 5,743,000 bushels, and were over two million bushels heavier than like movements in either 1904 or 1905. During the first nine months of the current year 74,852,000 bushels of grain were shipped eastward in this manner, as compared with a similar movement in 1904 of 67,205,000 bushels and in 1905 of 60,509,000 bushels. Eastbound flour movements during the month totaled 287,692 barrels in 1905, 261,851 barrels in 1904 and 248,424 barrels in 1903, while similar movements for the nine-month period were 3,532,301 barrels in 1905, 5,193,022 in 1904, and 3,185,301 barrels in 1903.

Decided improvements have also been manifested in wheat arrivals at distributing centers, and at the four spring wheat markets of Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Duluth and Chicago, receipts of this cereal from August 1 to September 30 totaled 30,040,989 bushels, as against similar arrivals in 1904 of 25,904,705 bushels, and in 1905 of 23,430,422 bushels. As compared with the 1904 figures gains were made at the markets of Milwaukee, Duluth, and Minneapolis, Chicago having sustained a loss of considerably over a million bushels. At the winter wheat markets of Toledo, St. Louis, Detroit, and Kansas City the receipts of wheat from July 1 to September 30 amounted to 32,918,965 bushels, being nearly three million bushels in excess of corresponding movements in 1904 and almost seven million bushels heavier than those for 1903.

The most noteworthy gains, however, in the volume of domestic commerce, appear to have occurred in connection with the tonnage movement on the Great Lakes, the total increase in lake shipments during the present year to and including September 30, as compared with similar movements in 1904, having aggregated 14,739,265 net tons, meaning a gain in the four outboard movement of 211,225 net tons, in the grain and flaxseed movement of 22,394,715 bushels, in the coal movement of 531,310 net tons, in the ore and mineral movements of 11,743,751 gross tons, in the lumber movement of 76,801 M feet, and in the movement of unclassified freight of 468,661 net tons. While these increases may, to a certain extent, be traced to the restrictive influence of labor difficulties in 1904, improvement in the present year's commercial conditions generally, must also be given a share of the credit.

Cities along the Atlantic coast showed large gains during September in connection with receipts and shipments of grain. At Boston, cereal arrivals during the month totaled 2,632,017 bushels, an increase of over a million bushels if compared with a like movement in 1904. At this city total receipts of grain during the first nine months of the current year amounted to 15,288,043 bushels, as compared with a similar total inbound movement in 1904 of 11,410,934 bushels, the gain thus indicated for the 1905 arrivals being largely due to heavier corn receipts. Shipments for like periods were 11,490,855 bushels in 1905 and 5,579,593 bushels in 1904.

At New York receipts of grain during the month of September totaled 9,518,990 bushels, as against a corresponding inbound movement in 1904 of 6,123,651 bushels. Of the former month's movement 7,932,259 bushels were received by rail, 1,532,975 bushels by canal, and 53,650 bushels by river and coast. The grand total receipts of grain and flour and cornmeal reduced to bushels at New York during the first nine months of the current year aggregated 80,742,656 bushels, as against 63,117,941 bushels in 1904.

Philadelphia's grain receipts during the month of September reached a total of 2,779,025 bushels, being over a million and a half bushels in excess of a corresponding movement in 1904, due to increases in the arrivals of wheat, corn, and oats. Shipments for the month, which were 645,345 bushels in 1905, were 59,314 bushels in 1904. Total grain receipts at Philadelphia during the first nine months of the current year aggregated 13,203,016 bushels, in contrast with 11,231,783 bushels in 1904. Heavy gains were made in the arrivals of wheat and oats.

At Baltimore receipts of grain during September reached a total of 2,919,041 bushels, in contrast with a similar movement in 1904 of 1,566,465 bushels. During a nine-month period 16,811,325 bushels of grain were received at this city, an amount over 3½ million bushels in excess of a like movement in 1904, the improvement being largely due to heavier receipts of corn and oats.

Preliminary returns of grain exports from the United States during September, which includes about 97 per cent of such exports, show that the foreign withdrawals amounted to 14,409,668 bushels, as compared with a corresponding movement in 1904 of 4,288,871 bushels. Of the 1905 movement 9,390,432 bushels were shipped by way of the Atlantic ports, 1,170,649 bushels by way of the Gulf ports, 1,266,336 bushels by way of the Pacific ports, and 2,582,251 bushels by way of the northern border, lake, and other border ports. During the first nine months of 1905, 105,219,693 bushels of grain were exported from various United States ports, and of this quantity 60,930,285 bushels were credited to Atlantic ports, 34,291,760 bushels to Gulf ports, 5,808,238 bushels to Pacific ports, and 14,189,410 bushels to northern, lake, and other border ports. A similar total outboard movement in 1904 aggregated 48,573,706 bushels. Both the Atlantic and Gulf ports made heavy gains in connection with the exportation of cereals during the first nine months of the current year, if compared with like movements in 1904, although the total increase at the Atlantic ports, either from an actual or a relative standpoint, greatly exceeded that at the Gulf ports. Total corn exports, which were 82,752,121 bushels in 1905, as against 34,441,771 bushels in 1904, were the greatest factors in the accomplishment of this improved condition.

Latest available figures obtained from commercial sources indicate that the total available supply of cotton brought into sight during September amounted to 1,303,583 bales, as against a similar supply in 1904 of 1,362,336 bales and in 1903 of 750,233 bales. The net overland movement for the month totaled 18,729 bales in 1905, 14,023 bales in 1904, and 1,895 bales in 1903. Of the domestic takings for the current month, 118,154 bales went to northern mills and 155,769 bales to southern mills, a total of 303,923 bales, in contrast with similar takings in 1904 of 264,423 bales and in 1903 of 232,757 bales. As compared with the 1904 takings, the receipts both for the northern and southern mills indicate slight increases.

645,345 bushels in 1905, were 59,314 bushels in 1904. Total grain receipts at Philadelphia during the first nine months of the current year aggregated 13,203,016 bushels, in contrast with 11,231,783 bushels in 1904. Heavy gains were made in the arrivals of wheat and oats.

At Baltimore receipts of grain during September reached a total of 2,919,041 bushels, in contrast with a similar movement in 1904 of 1,566,465 bushels. During a nine-month period 16,811,325 bushels of grain were received at this city, an amount over 3½ million bushels in excess of a like movement in 1904, the improvement being largely due to heavier receipts of corn and oats.

Preliminary returns of grain exports from the United States during September, which includes about 97 per cent of such exports, show that the foreign withdrawals amounted to 14,409,668 bushels, as compared with a corresponding movement in 1904 of 4,288,871 bushels. Of the 1905 movement 9,390,432 bushels were shipped by way of the Atlantic ports, 1,170,649 bushels by way of the Gulf ports, 1,266,336 bushels by way of the Pacific ports, and 2,582,251 bushels by way of the northern border, lake, and other border ports. During the first nine months of 1905, 105,219,693 bushels of grain were exported from various United States ports, and of this quantity 60,930,285 bushels were credited to Atlantic ports, 34,291,760 bushels to Gulf ports, 5,808,238 bushels to Pacific ports, and 14,189,410 bushels to northern, lake, and other border ports. A similar total outboard movement in 1904 aggregated 48,573,706 bushels. Both the Atlantic and Gulf ports made heavy gains in connection with the exportation of cereals during the first nine months of the current year, if compared with like movements in 1904, although the total increase at the Atlantic ports, either from an actual or a relative standpoint, greatly exceeded that at the Gulf ports. Total corn exports, which were 82,752,121 bushels in 1905, as against 34,441,771 bushels in 1904, were the greatest factors in the accomplishment of this improved condition.

Wisdom in a Nut Shell

There are two kinds of WISE people:

1. Those with FORESIGHT.
2. Those with HINDSIGHT, who after it is too late kick themselves for doing as they did.

Which are you going to be?

Will you use foresight in a financial way and by having Dr. Richards do your dental work SAVE A GOOD SHARE of your hard-earned money?

OR

Will you go right ahead and pay twice what you ought for your dentistry and then kick yourself for so doing, when you see what elegant work your friends have had at the hands of Dr. Richards for half the money?

It hurts us to find that others have made a better investment than we, when we know that it was in our power to have made that deal ourselves.

The retrospective is a poor point of view for anything else than REGRETS.

It does teach one thing though, and that is "Not to fall into the same ditch twice."

HALLOWEEN PRANK CAUSED

A FIRE DEPARTMENTS RUN

Paper on Bill-Boards at Corner of McKee Boulevard and Eastern Avenue Set on Fire.

Small boys set fire to the bill-boards at the corner of McKee boulevard and Eastern avenue last evening and the fire department was called out to extinguish the blaze at 11:30 p. m. The paper on the boards was burned but otherwise no damage was done and the fire was out when the department arrived.

NONE ARRESTED FOR HALLOWEEN PRANKS

Pranks Last Evening Were Mostly of Harmless Order—Wire Across South Franklin Street.

No pranks which resulted seriously were committed by youngsters last evening and there were no calls at the police station. Marshal Appleby and his officers covered a large amount of territory, however, and dispersed numerous gangs who were plotting mischief. A wire was stretched across South Franklin street early in the evening and might have resulted, seriously for the first of the fire teams in the run at eleven had not an interurban car broken it. Numerous aprons connecting the curbing with the street were removed but people were on the lookout and none stumbled and fell. Assistance to the assistant street commissioner in making way for new walks was rendered in several instances, boards being torn up in front of the Prichard property on South Bluff, and in front of the German Lutheran church on Academy and School streets. A wheelbarrow was hung from a lamp-post at the corner of Cherry and Holmes streets. While one division of a gang attracted Fred Marx to the rear of his house by their noise, another carried an old mortar box onto his front porch. Near the Court House park a veranda chair was hung from a lamp-post.

CURRENT ITEMS

New Literary Society: A number of young men met in the Y. M. C. A. building last evening to transact business toward the organization of a literary society. This was the second meeting and a third will be held next Monday evening. When the organization is perfected it is probable that meetings will be held every two weeks. The society is to be independent of the Association.

Bids for Filling Cases: Simon Smith, Edward Rathern, and P. M. Green, who compose the public buildings committee of the county board, met this afternoon to consider several bids made by manufacturers of filing cases such as are to be installed in the new addition to the courthouse. This addition was to have been finished last night but is still far from being completed. Contractor David Stewart has had considerable difficulty in securing the iron roofing. The building itself is to cost something over $6,000 and the filing cases and furnishing a thousand or two more. It is probable, however, that the $10,000 appropriation will not be used up at this time.

Marriage Licenses: Applications for marriage licenses have been filed by Low H. Barber of Sioux City, Ia., and Caroline Reeder of Janesville; Edward Quigley of Fulton and Dealey Boyle of Edgerton; William Gurney and Bertha Shenke, both of Janesville; and Watson W. Avers and Genevieve Tenquist, both of Janesville. A license was granted some time ago to Willard I. Bradford of La Prairie and Myrtle B. Badle of Shopshire.

Drunks in Court: Albert Dorsey was sentenced to municipal court today to pay a fine of $10 or spend 60 days in jail, but sentence was suspended on condition that he sign the temperance pledge. "A team is assured for Janesville and we have already commenced to solicit subscriptions for stock," was his concluding statement. Mr. Powers had come here from Madison where he regards the outlook for a club next year as most encouraging.

The reports are to be returned to the health officer of a city or the village clerk and by them returned to the register of deeds. All accidents of the kind from June 17, 1905, the date when the law went into effect, with full particulars, must be reported. The blanks have just been received at the register of deeds' office.

WILL NOT TOLERATE USE OF INTOXICANTS

In Response to Complaints Regarding Certain Patrolmen, Marshal Appleby Makes Statement.

Reports that some of the local patrolmen have been under the influence of liquor while on their beats recently have reached City Marshal Appleby and he made this declaration this afternoon: "Any police officer drinking intoxicating liquors during the time he is on duty will be taken before the fire and police commission. I believe every citizen will approve of this. I don't think an officer who is drunk can know when another man is drunk. It's one of two things—a man can't do justice to whisky and also do justice to his work as a police officer."

The second annual Y. P. A. convention of the Madison district of the Wisconsin conference of the Evangelical association will convene at the Emmanuel Evangelical church in Monroe on Friday, Nov. 3, and will hold its sessions over Sunday.

Franksville, Racine county, is infested with a gang of sneak thieves and burglars, and residents are arming themselves and watching nights. Thus far the thieves have stolen two wagon-loads of oats, entered two residences, and made four other attempts.

Contractors in Kenosha are making an effort to form a combination which has for its purpose the control of the sale of all building materials used in Kenosha. All of the leading builders of the city have been asked to join in the combine, and it is claimed that the combine will be so strong that it will completely control the building interests of the city.

The contract for supplying the nine state charitable and penal institutions with meat for the ensuing three months has been awarded by the state board of control to Libby, McNeill & Libby of Chicago. The successful bid was $4,319, the lowest of six submitted. Swift & Co. of Chicago furnished the meat during the last three months, receiving $4,500 for it. Under the new contract the price to be paid for carcasses of prime native fed steers, the largest item in the list, delivered at the different institutions, is $5.75 per 100 pounds.

Judge Murray F. Tuley, chief justice of Chicago, has gone to the Penitentiary in Kenosha for an indefinite rest. He is said to be suffering from exhaustion.

While driving near Birmahood, William Krause lost control of his horses, was thrown out and killed. The team was stopped in the village after running about four miles.

In a spirited contest at the special election for alderman in the third ward of Beloit E. A. Lufkin, the conservative candidate, was elected by a large majority over his opponent, Ham Everson.

SCHOOL ROMANCE ENDS IN MARRIAGE

Wedding of Miss Kathryn Isabel Fenton and Roy Carlos Palmer Takes Place This Afternoon.

Miss Kathryn Isabel Fenton and Roy Carlos Palmer, well-known young people of this city, were happily married this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Fenton, 125 Madison street. The wedding was an informal one, the bride assisting her parents in receiving the guests and the company of sixty people being composed entirely of relatives and a few intimate friends.

The Rev. Robert C. Denison, pastor of the First Congregational church, read the impressive ring service, the bride party standing in a bower of trailing vines from the mountains of Pennsylvania, sent for the occasion by friends of the bride. Miss Josephine Edna Fenton, youngest sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and the groom was attended by his brother, Edward A. Palmer, who is attending the University of Wisconsin.

The bride's gown was of white dotted silk Eolian over ivory tulle; simply made and trimmed with Mechlin lace and tiny bows of white satin ribbon. She carried bride's roses. Her maid of honor was gowned in reseda green crepe cloth with under blouse of flowered pink and white mull.

After the ceremony and congratulations, the wedding luncheon was served by the Misses Belle MacLean, Emma MacLean, Helen Estes, Irene Crowley, Susie Paul, and Alice Harper. The bride's table, at which the bride party, the parents of bride and groom and the Rev. and Mrs. Denison were served, was decorated with Enchantress carnations and asparagus plumes, while the parlors were prettily but simply decorated with large white and pink chrysanthemums. The rooms were darkened and lighted with the soft glow of candles.

The bride is the fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Fenton and has grown to womanhood in this city. Mr. Palmer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Palmer of 53 Terrace street, is in the employ of McVicar Brothers and is prominent in Y. M. C. A. athletics. Both young people were graduated from the Janesville High school in the class of 1899, this being the third school romance of that class which has culminated in marriage within the last three months.

The newly married couple left at 4:40 o'clock for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home in the McVicar flats on South Main street.

ROCK COUNTY MAN IS NOTED APPLE GROWER

Former Resident Here, Now in New Jersey, Grows Large Apple Crops.

W. F. Ely, a former resident of the town of Porter of this county and now making his home in Morris county, New Jersey, has grown some very fine apples, which have received flattering notices in eastern papers. Mr. Ely has many relatives and friends in the county, among them being W. H. Ely and E. F. and D. F. Sayre, his brother-in-laws. The following is the article taken from the Madison, New Jersey, Eagle:

"Some weeks ago the Eagle called the attention of its readers to a number of fine apples, which were on exhibition in the office window. The following we take from the Orange Chronicle, of the 13th, regarding them:

The largest and most beautiful apples ever seen in Orange, if not in the state, have appeared during the past few weeks, brought from the orchard of W. F. Ely of Hanover, Morris county. A few years ago Mr. Ely brought from Wisconsin a number of varieties to graft on his trees and is now just beginning to market the product. One of the grafts was given him by Prof. Goff of the Wisconsin Horticultural society, who wished him to bring east and propagate it here and report as to its success. That he was successful is evidenced by the fact that he has grown them measuring fourteen by fifteen and one-half inches in circumference, fifteen filling a peach basket and selling for 75 cents. It took but forty-five and forty-six to make a bushel, for which Freeman Bros. and Jacobus Bros. paid $1.50, making over three and five cents a piece for apples at wholesale in September in the fruit growing state of New Jersey. Mr. Ely has been known for a number of years as "the apple man," making some weeks three and four trips to Orange with the fruit. For over the past three years, forty months in succession, he has sold apples in Orange, never having missed a month during this time, a claim few farmers can make."

Half a century ago Rev. Fr. John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., through over work and exposure, became seriously run-down, a cold and stubborn cough and lung trouble threatened his life. An eminent specialist gave Father John, as he was fondly called, a prescription to cure the cold and remove the lung trouble as well as to build up and strengthen the body. The clergyman began to improve at once, the cough disappeared and his lungs healed. It corrected his diges-

Judith of the Plains

—By—
MARIE MANNING.
Author of "Lord Allingham, Bankrupt"

Copyright, 1905, by Harper & Brothers

Dolly broke into a light canter. This evidently was not an occasion for dawdling. There was a touch of business about the way the reins were held that made the mare settle down to work. But her dainty hoofs made little apparent progress against the space and silence of the desert. Five, ten, fifteen miles and the curving shoulder of the mountain that she must cross still mocked in the distance. Only the sun moved in that vast world of seemingly immutable forms.

There was no stoic Sioux in Judith now. The girl that breathed the crests of the foothills shrank in terror from the loneliness and the suggestion of foes lurking in ambush. The sun dropped behind the mountain, leaving a blood red pool in his wake, like fugitive Cain. Already night was sweeping over the earth from mountain shadows that flowed imperceptibly together like blackened pools.

"Ah, Dolly, my dear, a horse is the place for women folk when the night comes—a horse, the fire burning clear, the kettle singing, and—" Dolly whinnied an affirmative without waiting for the picture to be completed. The wilderness was being gradually swallowed by the shadows, as deliberately as a snake swallows its victim. They were nearing the mountains. The hot blasts of air from the desert blew more and more intermittently. The breeze swept keen from the hills, towering higher and higher, and Judith breathed deep of the play fragrance and felt the tension of things loosen a little.

Whitening cattle bones gleamed from the darkness, tragic reminders of hard winters and scant pasturage, and Judith, with the Indian superstition that was in the marrow of her bones, read ghostly warnings in the empty eye sockets of the grinning skulls that stared up at her. She dared not think of the dangers that the looming darkness might conceal or of what she might find at her journey's end or—"Whoo, Dolly! Softly, girl. Is it my foolish, white blood nerves, or is some one following?"

The mare had been trained to respond to the slightest touch on her mouth and stopped instantly. Judith swayed slightly in the saddle with the heaving of the sweating horse. The blood beat at her temples, confusing what she actually heard with what her imagination pictured. She was half-way up a towering spur of the Wind river when she slid from the saddle, and, putting her ear to the ground, listened, Indian fashion. Above the throbbing stillness of the desert night, that came to her murmuringly, like the imprisoned roar of the sea from a shell, she could hear the regular beat of horse's hoofs following up the steep mountain grade.

She scrambled up with the desperate nimbleness of a hunted thing, but when she attempted to vault to the saddle her limbs failed, and she sank clinging to the pommel. Twice she tried and twice the trembling of her limbs held her captive. With the loss of each moment the beat of the hoofs on the trail below became more distinct. The very desperation of her plight kept her clinging to the pommel, incapable of thought, so that when she finally flung herself to the saddle, she was surprised to find herself there. To the left the trail dropped sharply to a precipice, choked by the close crowding of many scrub pines. To the right the snow-clad spires of the Wind river kept their eternal vigil.

The trail had begun to widen. The horse behind her again stumbled, loosening a stone that rolled with crashes and echoes down to the precipice below. She took advantage of the widening of the trail to urge Dolly forward. Her impulse was to put spurs to the mare and run, to take chances with loose stones, a narrowing trail and the possibility of Dolly's stumbling and breaking a leg, but discretion prompted the showing of a brave front, the pleasantness of the road, with light as the last resource of desperation.

Suddenly gaining what seemed to be a plateau, she wheeled and waited the Below considered the latest move of the horseman above. They were so near that Judith could hear the labored breathing of the sweating horse. The blackness of the night had become a tangible thing. The towering mountains were one piece with the gapless precipice, the trail, the scrub pines; the gauntlet on her hand. The horse below resumed its stumbling gait. Judith crowded Dolly close to the rocky wall. If the chance came of the wilderness—should pass her by in the darkness—God speed him!

"What the deuce are you blocking the trail for?" sung out a voice from the darkness. At sound of it Judith's heart stopped beating. The voice was Peter Hamilton's.

CHAPTER X.

AND Judith, taken unawares by the unexpected turn of things, comforted as a lost child that is found, told all her feeling for him in the way she called his name. The easy tenderness of the man awoke. His senses swayed to the magic of her voice; the mystery of the night, the shadow-world in which they two, "twixt earth and sky, were alone. They rode without speaking. Peter's hand sought hers, and all her woman's terror of the desolation, her fear of the vague terrors of the dreadful night, spoke in her answering pressure. It was as if the desert had given, them to each other as they groped through the silent darkness. In the great company of earth, sky, silence, and this great hearted woman Peter grew conscious of a real thrill. There were depths to life—vast, still depths. This woman's unselfish love for him made him realize them. He felt his soul sweeping out on the great tide of things. "Farther and farther" it swept. His patron saint, caution, beckoning frantically from the receding shore, was miles behind. "Judith!" he said, and he scarce recognized his own voice. "Judith!" He struggled as a swimmer in a drowning clutch. Then his patron saint threw him a life-line, and he saved the situation.

"Judith!" he said, a third time, and now he knew his voice. "Look!" she whispered. The sky had lost its forbidding blackness. The sharp notches of the mountains, faintly outlined in white, illuminated through an outline of space. "Venus" hung in the west, burning softly as a shaded lamp. The trail they climbed seemed to end in her pale yellow light.

Peter had saved the situation, but the wild beauty of the night stirred in him that gift of silver speech that was ever his tribute to the sex rather than the woman. He bent toward Judith. A loosened strand of her hair blew across his cheek. The breakneck ride to Kitty was already the madness of a dead and gone incarnation. He pointed to the pale star and told her it was the omen of their destiny; the formless blackness through which they had groped was the way of life, but for such as were not condemned to eternal darkness. Venus held high her lamp, and they scaled the heights.

And Judith, listening, found her heart a battlefield of love and hate. "Were women dogs, that men should play with them in idle moods, caress them, and fling them out for other toys?" she demanded of herself, even while the tones of his voice melted her innermost being to wholeness for this hour that he was wholly hers.

Gaily, with ready turns, of speech and snatches of song trod in his musical baritone, Peter rode through the night even as he rode through life. A Sir Knight of the Joyous Heart, untroubled by the wing of sorrow, loving his pale gleams for the values they gave the picture. And Judith understood by reason of that exquisite perception that was hers in all matters pertaining to him and, knowing, only loved the more.

Peter put a restraining hand on Dolly's bridle and called Judith's name, and all the mountains made music of it. The echo sang the old Hebrew name as if it had been a psalm. Peter's voice gave it to the mountains joyously, but the mountains gave it back in the minor. And Judith was reminded of the soft, slinging syllables that her mother in the Indian way had made of her daughter's Indian name. The remembrance tugged at her heart. In her joy at seeing Peter she had forgotten that the errand that had brought her was an errand of life and death—life and death for her brother!

But Peter's ready enthusiasms pressed him hard. Surely love making was the business of such a night. "Ah, Judith, goddess of the heights, if I could sing your name like the mountains, would you love me a little?"

For his pains he had a flash of white teeth in a smile that recalled his first acquaintance with Kitty, the sort of smile one would give to a "nice boy" when his maneuvers were a trifle obvious. "Not if you sang my name as the chorus of all the Himalayas and the Rockies and Andes and with the fire of all their volcanoes and the beauty of their snows and the strength of all their hills, for it's not my way to love a little!"

He bent toward her to brush her cheek lightly, but Judith, who said little because she felt much, was in no mood to brook such dalliance, and, urging the mare sharply, she cantered down the divide at peril of life and limb. Peter, cursing the heavy footed beast he rode, came stumbling after.

Judith rode wildly through the night leaving Peter lags behind to beseech.

to prophesy one happening if she should slip, and to scramble after, as best he might, on the heavy footed beast he repudiated with all his ancestors as oxen to the fourth generation. But the woman kept her pace. She had stern questions to put to herself, and they were likely to have truer answers if Peter were elsewhere than riding beside her. Whither was he going? They had met casually on a trail known to few honest men. It led over a spur of the Wind river to a sort of no man's land, the hiding place of horse and cattle thieves. She had gone to warn her brother. Could he be going there? She could not bring herself to finish.

Her heart was divided against itself. Within it were fought again the red and the white man's battles bitterly and to the finish. And now the white man, with his open warfare, won, and all her love rose up and scoured her little faith. "She would wait on the trail for Peter, penitent and ashamed. And while she waited suspiciously bred of her Indian blood stirred distrustfully, and she told herself that her mother's daughter made a worthy champion of the ways of white men. Did Hamilton hunt her brother gallowayward, making merry with her the meantime? He had not even been courteously concerned as to where she was going when they met on the divide, and she had not thought to wonder at his possible destination.

She was by this time well down the divide. The temperature had risen perceptibly on the down grade. The heat of the plains had already mingled with the cool hill air. The heights where Venus kept her love vigil were already past. Judith gave Dolly a breathing spell, herself, lounging easily mount-while. She knew how to take her ease in the saddle as well as any cow puncher on the range.

Peter, coming up with a much blown horse, found her chancing an Indian song.

"Sing a verse for me, Judith. Heaven knows I need something to straighten out my internal luck."

She had begun to cant, then stopped suddenly. "I must not. You know I am a Catholic." Suspicion that had been scotchd, not killed, raised its head. "What was his present venture?" Her eye had not changed in expression, nor a tone of her voice, but in her heart was a sickening distrust for all things. Her mind was busy with a multitude of schemes. Fool though she had been, she would not be the instrument of her brother's undoing.

"I've come too far," she cried in sudden dismay. "I should have stopped at the foot of the divide. I've never been over that trail before."

"You foolish child! Why should you stop in the middle of the wilderness?"

She wheeled the mare about and faced him, a figure of graven resolution.

"I promised to meet Tom Lorimer there. Now you know."

With which she cracked Dolly sharply with her heel and began to retrace her way over the trail. Peter turned his horse and followed, with the feeling of utter helplessness that a man has when confronted with the granite obstinacy of women. Judith had, meanwhile expected that the announcement of her mythical appointment with Tom Lorimer would be received differently. Tom Lorimer's reputation was of the worst. An eastern man formerly, an absconder from justice, rumor was busy with tales of ungodly merrymaking that went on at his ranch, where no woman went except painted wisps from the dance halls. But Peter was too loyal a friend, despite his shortcomings as a lover, to see in Judith's statement anything more than a sisterly devotion so deeply unselfish that it failed to take into account the danger to which she subjected herself.

BLOOD POISON THE BLACK FLAG

The black flag is an emblem of horror and dread. When it is hoisted by an army, the order has gone forth that "no quarter" will be given, everything must be destroyed. Helpless women and children, as well as opposing soldiers, meet the same fate, and a trail of desolation, suffering and death is left behind. Contagious Blood Poison is the black flag of the great army of disease. This vile disorder is known as the blackest and most hideous of all human afflictions, overthrowing its victims and crushing out the life. It is no respecter of persons; no matter how pure the blood may be or how innocently the disease is contracted, when this awful virus enters the circulation the hideous, hateful and humiliating symptoms begin to appear, and the sufferer feels that his very presence is polluting and contaminating. Usually the first sign of the disease is a little sore or ulcer, but as the blood becomes more deeply poisoned the severer symptoms are manifested, the mouth and throat ulcerate, the glands in the groins swell, a red rash breaks out on the body, the hair and eyebrows come out, and often the body is covered with copper-colored spots, pustular eruptions and sores. In its worst stages the disease affects the nerves, attacks the bones and sometimes causes tumors to form on the brain, producing insanity and death. Not only those who contract the poison suffer, but unless the virus is driven from the blood the awful taint is handed down to offspring, and they are its innocent victims. Blood Poison is indeed a "black flag." Mercury and Potash, so often used, never can cure the trouble. These minerals merely drive the symptoms away for awhile and shift the disease up in the system, and when they are left off it returns worse than before. This treatment not only fails to cure Blood Poison, but eats out the delicate lining of the stomach and bowels, produces chronic dyspepsia, loosens the teeth and frequently causes mercurial rheumatism to add to the patient's suffering. S. S. S., the great vegetable medicine, is the conqueror of this vile disease. It goes down to the very root of the trouble and cures by cleansing the blood of every particle of the poison. S. S. S. does not hide or cover up anything, but clears the entire circulation of virus and puts the system in good healthy condition. It cures safely as well as certainly, because there is not a particle of mineral in it. We offer a reward of $1,000.00 for proof that S. S. S. is not purely vegetable. When the blood is purified and strengthened with this great remedy the symptoms all pass away and no sign of the disease is ever seen again; nor is there left the least trace to be handed down to posterity. Special book with instructions for self-treatment and any medical advice desired will be sent without charge to all who write.

Several years ago I had blood poison and my flesh was in a awful condition. Great sores would break out and nothing but pain and misery would do any good. My hair and eyebrows fell out and I was a fright. My mouth was so sore I had to live on milk and water. I took mercury for a long time and instead of getting better I continued to grow worse and my arms and hands became so sore. My legs were drawn so I could not walk and I felt that my time was short here if I did not get some relief. I began to use your S. S. S. and it while the sores all healed, my rheumatism was cured and so-day I am a strong, well man. It got all the mercury out of my system and it cured me sound and well. TAKE PRISONER BACK TO BOSTON

Youth Accused of Murdering
Miss Geary Is in State of Collapse.

CLEAR SUIT CASE MYSTERY

Says That He Accompanied Chorus
Girls From Theater and That It
Was Arranged for the Unfortunate Woman to Be Operated On.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 1.—Morris Nathan, "privilege" man of the "Shepherd King" company, was taken to Boston by Detective Silas Smith. The boy was pale as death and scarcely able to walk when taken from his cell at Central police station.

Dr. H. G. Briggs examined Nathan at the request of Nathan's attorney, Henry M. Siskind. Dr. Briggs said: "Nathan should not be removed until he has had one night's sleep and three square meals. He has not slept or eaten since his arrest; he even refuses to drink water. The police may arrive in Boston with a dead man or with a mental and physical wreck."

One of the reasons assigned for the prisoner's extreme nervousness was that his cell in police headquarters was just across the alley from the Nixon theater, where the "Shepherd King" is being performed, and the strains of the music for the dance in which Miss Geary formerly participated were distinctly audible to the prisoner at each performance.

Prisoner Willing to Return.

Nathan pleaded with the doctor to arrange it so he could go to Boston immediately. Attorney Siskind came prepared to fight for requisition papers. Nathan said he would go to Boston in spite of his attorney and would walk if they would let him. "I don't care what they do to me. I want to get back to help find the man or woman who killed Ethel," he said. Nathan's determination finally prevailed upon the officers to take him back at once, they being fearful that unless they did he would collapse under the strain. The Pittsburg police were also anxious to get rid of him. Concerning the examination of Nathan, Director Moore said:

"It develops Nathan left Susan Geary on the night of Sept. 9, and she intended going to Mrs. Bishop's place in Boston, to be operated on. He did not advise her to go.

"There is no doubt in my mind that the Winthrop suit case mystery has been cleared. Morris Nathan, the young man in custody, admitted that he knew of Miss Geary's condition. While I cannot give out information which belongs to the Boston authorities, I will say that a man and woman will be arrested shortly, and this mystery cleared without a doubt."

Knew of Woman's Condition.

The prisoner, Nathan, told me that, accompanied by Rita Marie, Eleanor Barron, two of the chorus girls in the company, and Susan Geary, he left the theater in Boston on the night of Sept. 9, and they talked about the trouble Ethel Durrell complained of," said Superintendent of Police Wallace. "Nathan said one of the girls, I don't know which, advised Ethel to go to Mrs. Bishop's place, as it was the best place of its kind in Boston."

Mr. Wallace was also impressed with the boy's story, and he believes he is guiltless.

James R. McGarr, inspector of police of Boston, remained here to question Rita Marie and Eleanor Barron. Attorney Henry Siskind accompanied Nathan to Boston, and while waiting for his train made the startling statement that he expected to produce Miss Geary alive.

LONG MARCH FOR ARTILLERY

Utah and Kansas Batteries to Exchange Stations, Going Overland.

Salt Lake, Utah, Nov. 1.—An overland march of more than 1,000 miles has been planned for the Twenty-second battery of light artillery, now at Fort Douglas, near this city, and the Nineteenth light battery, now at Fort Riley, Kan., which have been ordered to exchange stations. The two commands will begin the march next week, going by way of Cheyenne, and the journey is scheduled to be completed in seventy days. The Twenty-second battery, which is composed largely of veterans of the Spanish-American war, numbers 120 men and 100 horses, with six guns and quarter-master's outfit.

CANNOT ENJOIN LABOR UNION

Court Decides Action Must Be Against Members as Individuals.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 1.—In a decision handed down by the Appellate court it was held that an action to enjoin a labor union could not be maintained for the reason that the organization which is not an incorporation cannot be sued as such, but the proceedings must be had, if at all, against its members as individuals.

NEW PUBLIC PRINTER COMES FROM BOSTON

Charles A. Stillings, Has Been Selected by the President to Succeed Oscar J. Ricketts.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Charles A. Stillings of Boston has been appointed public printer to succeed Oscar J. Ricketts, the acting public printer. Mr. Stillings was connected with a Boston printing house for some years, was once secretary of the Typothetae of Washington, and is now manager of the Printers' Board of Trade of New York city. He is a son of General Stillings, who was adjutant general on the staff of the late Commander-in-Chief Blackmar of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The appointment caused much surprise here because it was generally believed the President would make Mr. Ricketts the permanent public printer. Ricketts has been at the head of the government printing establishment since President Roosevelt summarily dismissed Frank W. Palmer for disobeying his orders in calling on Ricketts, who was foreman of printing, to show cause why Ricketts should not be dismissed for insubordination.

Mr. Stillings is a friend of Senator Crane of Massachusetts. It is understood that the Massachusetts senator first called the attention of the President to Stillings. The Illinois senators, together with Senator Platt of New York and a large number of western representatives, urged the President to appoint Ricketts.

APOLOGIZES TO REAR ADMIRAL

Reparation Is Made by Chinese Governor for Attack on Train.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The incident growing out of the attack on Admiral Train and his son by a Chinese mob, near Nanking, has been satisfactorily adjusted. The state department has received a dispatch, which said: "Admiral Train has just arrived at Shanghai. The incident occurred near Nanking Oct. 24. Train and his party were shooting, when a woman was accidentally wounded by Train's son, but her injuries were slight. The son was detained by the mob, but an amicable settlement was made. The mob afterward attacked and two Chinese were wounded by two civilians. No sailors took part in the engagement. The governor of Nanking apologized to the officers, restored their weapons and punished the ringleaders of the mob. The incident is regarded as closed."

MANY AMERICANS ABROAD.

Stated That More Than 100,000 Are at All Times Residing in European Cities.

Year by year the number of Americans residing in the chief European cities has been increasing. Two years ago an estimate of the number of Americans living in London was made and the number was shown to be 15,000; while 12,000 in Paris.

There are according to the last estimates 25,000 Americans residing in London, permanently, 30,000 in Paris, 8,000 each in Rome and Berlin, 2,500 in Munich, 1,500 in Florence and 1,000 in Venice.

There are at all times between 100,000 and 150,000 Americans resident in European cities, apart from the number of Americans who make a summer trip to Europe and come under the designation of either transients or travelers. Most European countries do not include in the census of inhabitants taken unaturalized foreigners, and for that reason the figures of the number of Americans are not always easy to get. Ten per cent. of the population of Paris, exclusive of transients, is made up of foreigners—250,000 foreigners constantly in Paris, of whom 30,000 are Americans.

Enormous Reservoir.

One of the largest works of man's hands is the artificial lake, or reservoir, in India, at Rajputana. This reservoir, said to be the largest in the world, known as the Great Tank of Dhebar, and used for irrigating purposes, covers an area of 21 square miles.

Ancient Foot Race.

The oldest annual footrace in the country, that for the "red hose" at Carnwath, Scotland, was run recently. It was established in 1491, and its maintenance is one of the provisions of the charter under which the Somervilles held the barony of Carnwath.

CURIOUS LIFE STATISTICS.

What Some Things Amount To in the Course of Three-Score Years and Ten.

A German mathematician has been doing a little figuring to demonstrate what the Biblical span of life of three score years and ten really means, and his results are very interesting, says the New York Herald.

Seventy years of life mean 840 months, or 25,550 days, equal to 613,200 hours, or 36,792,000 minutes or 2,207,520,000 seconds. It shows that a man reaching that age has gone to bed 35,350 times, and, excepting childhood, he has breakfasted 25,000 times, as well as dined and supped. Supposing that he had taken three cups of coffee or tea a day, once at each meal, he has consumed 75,000 cups of either beverage. If he smoked three cigars a day he would have consumed the enormous quantity of 54,750 cigars, which at five cents apiece would mean $2,737.50 went up in smoke. At the rate of a pound of meat a day he has eaten 25,000 pounds, or as much as 12 oxen. If he walked a mile a day, omitting, of course, his childhood, he has covered 25,000 miles.

He has taken 735,840,000 breaths, being 1,200 an hour, 28,800 a day and 10,512,000 in a year. The number of the heart beats is still greater. Let us suppose that there were 75 heart beats a minute. This would be 4,500 in an hour, 108,000 a day, 39,420,000 a year, and 2,759,400,000 for 70 years of life.

And so the statistics could go on ad infinitum, but the figures given will be sufficient to show what a life of 70 years means.

SEAMEN ON SHORE LEAVE.

Jackies Are No Longer the Roysterers That They Were in the Old Days.

Recently sailors by the hundreds from the North Atlantic squadron were given shore leave in New York, and they behaved themselves so well that the New York papers praised them highly. On this the Cleveland Plain Dealer says:

"With the disappearance of the old navy the roystering navy seaman began to disappear also. He survives as an occasional isolated case, but to regard him as typical is to slander the navy. In the short period since the outbreak of the Spanish war the contrast between the new and the old has become more marked, a result due chiefly to the influx of a new class of recruits, gathered largely from the west; Americans with hardly an exception, better educated than the recruits of former years, with better traditions, and, on the whole, perhaps less given to creating a riot, a rumpus and a row than the more fortunate young men whose frascos on college campuses are now being recorded for the delectation of the public. Within a few months reports from Kiel, London and Paris have shown that the American blue-jacket behaves himself abroad as well as at home. The fiction that he is incapable of rational enjoyment has survived too long."

'Neck Verse.'

The first verse of the fifty-first Psalm is called the "Neck Verse" for the reason that in former times a man condemned to death sometimes had a chance to save his life by proving that he could read, and this verse was used as a test.

Might Have Been Jonah's.

Some one remarked to Edward D. Sohler, the Boston lawyer, that he had read in a paper that a dead whale had driven ashore at Nantucket containing in its stomach a pair of boots marked "J." Mr. Sohler instantly replied: "They probably belonged to Jonah, and he must have left them when he stepped out."—New York Times.

Labor Notes

The American Society of Equity, a farmers' union organization, will meet in annual convention in Indianapolis, October 23d. The society now proposes to seek affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

Plumbers are striking in Hartford, Conn., and Springfield, Mass.

The new Pennsylvania Child Labor law, forbidding boys under fourteen years of age to work at the breakers and boys under sixteen to work in the anthracite mines, went into effect recently and when it is fully in force it is estimated 12,000 boys will have to quit work and be turned into the schools of the region.

60,000 women and children work in the match factories of Kobe, Japan.

The attempt to commit the British trade unionists to compulsory arbitration was again defeated by the recent Trade Union Congress. The proposition was defeated by a majority of 92,000 votes. Last year the majority against compulsory arbitration was 436,000 in a total vote slightly smaller than that recorded in the present instance.

St. Petersburg printers are again striking.

Trainmen on the New Haven railway have been notified that whenever they feel they have a grievance they will be entitled to a hearing before the executive officers through any of their fellow trainmen they may select to represent them for that purpose.

The semi-annual meeting of the Administrative council of the National Metal Trades Association was held in Cincinnati recently. The most important proposition under discussion was the merger of the National Foundrymen's association into the National Metal Trades Association.

Telegraph operators on the Great Northern Railway who did not join in the recent strike received pay checks for September representing just twice the usual amount.
